Letters to the Editor

Difficult times bind community together

Having just returned to Kwajalein we would like to thank the community for the outpouring of love and support following the passing of our daughter Robyn.

Kwaj truly is an amazing place to live and the strength of this community has been a great support to our family in this time of sorrow. The generosity displayed by all members of our community, both American and Marshallese, with their time, talents, resources and kind words has truly been a great comfort to us.

Robyn loved it here and it was because of all of you who helped her to grow and blossom here on Kwaj.

It is in times like these that we see that there are more things that bind us together than keep us apart. Thank you all for your love that has supported our family.

May God bless the family that is all the people of this atoll.

High school band hits all notes

By Maj. David Coffey
USAKA chief Host Nation Officer

Parents of Kwajalein High School Band members, your teenagers are ABNORMAL!

That is if you go by what you see in the news, movies, and television about how today's youth are so terrible and doomed to lead us down the path to ruin and destruction. I'm not saying that was my expectation as I made plans to take our forty member band to Majuro (sixteen of them overnight) to participate in the RMI's 25th Anniversary Constitution Day activities, but whatever my expectations were, I did underestimate this group of teenagers.

The band trip was an opportunity to increase U.S. representation at this important event, and to reward the band for the numerous times they have supported USAKA events here on Kwaj and at other RMI ceremonies. I believe the band's participation achieved both of these goals and then some.

This trip required the band members to really plan ahead, to stay up late and get up early, to constantly move all the heavy band equipment from one location to another, usually without vehicles, to set up in a hurry in less-than-ideal conditions, play their best for a few minutes, break down and do it again. And did I mention the long hours standing in the sun?

The Stage Band flew to Majuro Friday night with Dick Shields. They had a few minutes to recover their instruments, change, and lug all their equipment down the street for their first performance at the Cultural Center where they performed for a crowd of thousands during half-time for one of basketball tournament games. They received enthusiastic support from the audience, especially the kids who tried to rush the stage. This performance was broadcast nationwide on AM radio. After this a quick dinner at Spencer's Indian Restaurant and a quick walk to the Capitol Building where the KHS Stage Band was the lead act for a long night of entertainment for the Majuro community and all the visiting dignitaries.

The kids got a short night's sleep with four to a room at the Marshall Island's Resort and then a 6am wake-up for 7am breakfast while I ran to the airport to meet the remainder of the Marching Band and Cheryl Shields. Of course Cheryl was the only person all weekend who managed to get ahead of schedule and her kids were eating breakfast with their peers by the time I got to the airport to discover I was too late.

Time for the big show. The entire Marching Band marched through a downpour to arrive at the parade assembly area on time, only to find out they had a 90 minute delay and the rain only lasted five more minutes. When it finally started, they marched to the Capitol Building where they played for most of Majuro as well as three presidents, a few foreign ministers, and a dozen or so foreign ambassadors. They represented USAKA, the U.S. Government, and especially their parents, extremely well. They were the only group to march back to the assembly area (and on to the hotel) after four hours out in the sun. And they still weren't done.

At the hotel they ate a quick lunch then set up as the Concert Band to play for the luncheon President Note hosted for the visiting dignitaries. They were the only band that got to play at this event and this is where they really shone. The band was warmly received and conversation stopped while they played. The band was recognized and Dick Shields was introduced to President Note and some of the other dignitaries. After playing a 45 minute set the band had just enough time to get packed, changed, and moved to the airport for their flights back to Kwajalein. They were all safely home (except for some serious sunburn) by 9pm.

This was a Herculean effort by the band, Air Marshall Islands, the May Day Committee, AirScan, the Marshall Islands Visitors Authority, DOLCA, the Marshall Islands Resort, the College of the Marshall Islands, the parents of the band members, and most of all, Dick and Cheryl Shields. Despite everything we demanded of these kids they performed beyond expectations (mine anyways) and I honestly did not hear one single gripe the whole time. Not after bumpy plane rides, not after rushed meals, not after carrying tons of equipments down the road, and not even after hours baking in the sun. These kids performed four times in less than 24 hours! I made a point of asking them all if they wanted to do it again as they boarded the plane back to Kwaj and the answer was a unanimous yes. Even from Dick Shields!

I want to thank President Note and Foreign Minister Zackios for the invitation and support, and COL Brown for the permission and resources to make this happen. I want to thank the parents of the band members for trusting me with their kids; very sorry about the ones I burned (I'll be more careful next time). Mostly I want to thank the ladies and gentlemen of the Kwajalein High School Marching Band for representing us so magnificently and for being so abnormal. It gives me hope as the first of my five children just became a teenager this week.

ON THE COVER: The Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School Band marches past the capitol in Majuro Saturday as part of Constitution Day activities. The band played several venues and were among the contingent of Kwajalein representatives. Due to an early commitment to Majuro, the command was not able to support activities on Ebeye this year.

KRS president issues awards

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

Calibration Lab employees along with employees from Supply, IT, POL and Kwajalein School received the Presidential Award from Ike Richardson, KRS president, Wednesday for outstanding efforts.

The Calibration Lab employees — Song Banducci, Roy Carle, Don Hall, James Mack, Lorraine McGinnis, Danielle Molina, Frank Pawlowicz, Chad Riley, Brian Snyder, Leann Clayton, Judy Crouch, Howard Duarte, Debbie Proudfoot and, team lead, Terry Gimple — all received a $250 award to share or have a luncheon.

According to Gimple, the award was for minimizing backlogs. He added 95 percent or more of all the test equipment on Reagan Test Site must be in good working order and calibrated, which means the lab has a margin of 3 percent they can be back-logged. The lab's percentage was .35 percent.

"Their can-do attitude, backed up by hard work and energy focused on initially setting up files, data bases, coordinating shipments, packing, and contacting users for turn-in of [test measurement and diagnostic equipment]; all contributed as a team and helping the Lab work through some difficult times," Gimple said.

"We really appreciate your effort," Richardson said.

Medardo Yturralde, of Supply, and Michael Cheatham, of Information Technology, received awards for making it possible to post on the USAKA Intranet material safety data sheets for all of the hazardous material stored in the KRS warehouse, according to Deborah Black, executive assistant to Ike Richardson.

For averting a potentially dangerous fire Boston Shamory and Fredly Mawilong of POL, also received Presidential Awards.

"A subcontractor was welding on nearby Tank 9 when sparks, slag blew across the dividing wall into the MOGAS berm, catching the grass in the berm on fire," Black said. "They smelled something burning and grabbed fire extinguishers and doused the fire."

Lynn Beckler and Barbara Bicanich of the Kwajalein school received awards for their participation in the North Central Association Accreditation of the Kwajalein schools.

Presidential Awards program began in February.

Previous awards went to eight other employees who produced above and beyond their duties.

Long Range Air Launch Target flies flawlessly

By Jim Bennett

A successful rocket flight Sunday near Kwajalein demonstrated how missile testing doesn't always require a land-based target.

The Reagan Test Site supported the Missile Defense Agency's recent test flight of the Long Range Air Launch Target, a missile that is literally dropped out the back of a C-17 Globemaster aircraft before it ignites and flies to its target.

"This was a demonstration flight to prove the viability of dropping a target from an aircraft," said Maj. Win Keller, RTS Theater Missile Defense test director. "We're not tied to a land-based target anymore ... so [testers] can go where sensors that can look at you best are."

The mission, led by the Pacific Missile Range Facility in Kauai, began with the C-17 taking off from Kauai.

The KMRSS Worthy safety ship coordinated all safety and communications near the target area in the Pacific, and AirScan pilots flew over the area to ensure that no civilian aircraft or boats were in danger. Forecasters at 3D Research provided weather support and sensors on Roi-Namur and a parachute from the back of the plane, allowing the rushing air to pull the palletted missile from the plane. Another chute opened and the missile fell 5,000 feet before releasing the pallets and firing.

"It was a pretty large mission," Keller said. "We collected all the data the customers asked for."

The Worthy left for sea April 15 and is scheduled to return Monday. Keller and other range officials are planning a homecoming.

"They were out there a month," Keller said. "They did a great job."

The missile — co-developed by MDA, the U.S. Air Force Space and Missile Command and L3/Coleman Aerospace Corp., simulated a theater-type reentry vehicle, according to a press release.

LRALT was developed as a target for realistic testing of the Ballistic Missile Defense System.

The LRALT program is managed by the MDA Targets and Countermeasures Directorate, the release stated. LRALT is based on two Minuteman II second stages taken from deactivated assets.

Kwajalein tracked the unfolding events. Furthermore, two observation aircraft launched from Kwajalein to collect data on the flight.

When the C-17 reached a designated spot, the LRALT released

Comets set to appear in Kwajalein night skies

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

May is a big sky-watching month with two comets visible set to appear.

"There is currently a comet, NEAT Q4, visible in binoculars in the south west after sunset," said resident Bob Carson. "It should get brighter towards the weekend and then start to fade again after the 11th or 12th."

NEAT Q4 was first discovered in 2001, and is named for Near-Earth Asteroid Tracking sky survey program, according to www.skyandtelescope.com.

"If it clears up, I will be bringing my telescope down to Emon on Monday and, or Tuesday night to see it," Carson said.

Even though it is not as bright as hoped, it is still visible.

After May 20, Kwajalein viewers will see a second comet, LINEAR T7, that mainland viewers can't see.

"It should be brighter than NEAT Q4, but comets are very difficult to predict," Carson said. "I saw it once a month or so ago in binoculars when it was still faint.

"It probably cannot be seen with the naked eye unless the sky is really clear and you know exactly where to look," he added. "It can be seen through binoculars or a telescope, again if you know where to look. It is changing position daily, so you really need to access and use the sky charts at the web sites. It's visible from the end of dusk, about 8 p.m., until it sets, which is a couple of hours later. It will be higher in the sky at 8 p.m. each day."

The LINEAR T7 was discovered in 2002 and named for Lincoln Laboratory Near Earth Asteroid Research sky survey program.

"I haven't looked for it since, and it is currently getting very close to the sun, and therefore very hard to see," Carson said. "It emerges from the sun's glare about the 19th or 20th. If it stays bright, I will do a telescope night for it as well, probably around the 22nd or so."

More information on the comets can be found at Sky and Telescope at www.skyandtelescope.com/observing/objects/comets/article_1229_1.asp. The dates listed are stateside; add one day for Kwaj time.

Citizen contractors face danger rebuilding Iraq

By Sgt. 1st Class Marcia Triggs
Army News Service

WASHINGTON – The kidnapping and murdering of civilian contractors in Iraq has not deterred thousands of workers from providing aid to American troops and assisting with the build-up of Iraq and Afghanistan.

Restoring fuel, water and power lines. Providing humanitarian aid. Maintaining military vehicles. There are umpteen jobs being performed by civilians in Iraq, and for most of the workers their actions will go unknown.

"I have been part of several large incidents within Iraq where many people have lost their lives or been brutally hurt due to coward acts of terrorism," said William Hodge, a firefighter with Kellogg, Brown and Root.

Hodge, of Sumter, S.C., is part of an education program that is training 125 people on the local fire department, and bringing the country up to 21st century firefighting.

"Seeing smiles on little kid's faces as we pass by in fire trucks is remarkable," Hodge said.

Kellogg, Brown and Root, a subsidiary of Halliburton, has more than 24,000 employees and sub-contractors in Iraq and Kuwait. The company has lost 34 personnel, including the recent confirmed death of Tony Johnson, 47, of Riverside, Calif., who was involved in a convoy ambush April 9.

Part of that same convoy was Thomas Hamill, a truck driver with Kellogg, Brown and Root, a subsidiary of Halliburton, has more than 24,000 employees and subcontractors in Iraq and Kuwait.

Halliburton, who escaped from his Iraqi captives May 2. Hamill, from Macon, Miss., suffered a gunshot wound, and will soon be reunited with his wife, Kellie, at the Landstuhl Regional Medical Center in Germany.

A firefighter with KBR said that he will remain in the dangerous environment in order to support the overall cause – freedom.

"Without contractors, the military would have to fill positions that may be of less importance in nature, rather than being on the battle field enhancing our military force," said Evan Bolles, a firefighter in Baghdad "I know that by volunteering it gives relief to our Soldiers who have been in the area for a long time."

The U.S. military has always used contractors in times of war. However, until the charred bodies of civilians hanging from a bridge in Iraq were aired on the news, most Americans didn't realize how close contractors work with Soldiers in combat zones.

"Our employees followed Soldiers into Iraq within 72 hours after they crossed the border and began providing logistical support," said Patrice Mingo, a Halliburton public affairs specialist. "They [Halliburton employees] live in the same camps that come under mortar fire, and travel in the same convoys that come under attack."

Contractors augment the military by providing non-combat services. There are more than 100 job descriptions that KBR are recruiting for, to include food service, laundry, water purification, and fuel distribution, Mingo said.

MPRI, a smaller company headquartered in Alexandria, Va., has about 500 contractors in Iraq and Afghanistan providing convoy security, instruction to ministries of defense and also training to the new Iraqi army.

Even though some countries have urged their civilians to leave Iraq and American corporations, such as General Electric have suspended operations, MPRI has not had any withdrawals, said Rick Kiernan, vice president of Strategic Communications for MPRI.

"We are prudent in our daily movement to and from our place of duty. We also have the benefit of working and living on secure compounds," said Kiernan, who is a retired Army lieutenant colonel.

Former military personnel make up the majority of MPRI's contractors overseas, performing similar duties based on their military training and expertise, Kiernan said. Minus the uniform and an M-16, a number of KBR workers are also doing the same job they once did in the military.

A common quote from veterans is, "I see how much KBR improves Soldiers' quality of life, and I want to help provide these brave men and women with support and comforts that I didn't have during my service."

What motivates citizens, who aren't enlisted in the armed forces, to leave their families behind to build a democratic nation elsewhere in the world?

"If the troops can do it, so can we," said Terry Johnston, a firefighter from La Porte, Texas. "Just because we are civilians doesn't make us any better than the military. I want to do my part as an American to help support the troops in any way possible."

Contractors working overseas can earn up to a six-figure salary, which can be an incentive for some to volunteer for dangerous duty. There are three reoccurring reasons people volunteer to work overseas – patriotism, money, and opportunity for change, Mingo said. But once they arrive in country and begin working with Soldiers, their desire to serve becomes paramount, she added.

"What I'm doing in Iraq doesn't compare to what the Soldiers are doing for the locals," said Tyler Libby, a firefighter with KBR. "Soldiers don't have a choice but to be here. God bless them all, and I hope them a safe return home."

Unlike Soldiers, employees for KBR sign a one-year contract, Mingo said. However, if conditions change and they make the decision to leave, KBR will fly them back to their home of record, she added.

"Our employees and subcontractors understand the danger in Iraq and – with very few exceptions – they are steadfast in their dedication to complete the job in Iraq," Mingo said. "KBR also provides 10 days rest and relaxation for employees every four months."

Command names Stevisons 'Great American Family'

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

The Mitch and Cindy Stevison family will represent the command group here after being nominated for the U.S. Army Space and Missile Defense Command's "Great American Family Award" competition.

Capt. Mitch Stevison; his wife, Cindy; and children Brandon, Hunter and Katy -- received the most votes in an election held among U.S. Army active duty and civilian personnel recently.

"A number of families were nominated and the Stevisons garnered the most votes," said Operations Officer Lt. Col. Gerry Davie.

He added their nomination was for their contributions to the community at large.

"Everywhere you turn you see the Stevison's family positive impact," Davie said. "You don't have to look to see what they have done."

Davie said, as a fellow officer with a family, he felt the Stevisons deserved the nomination.

"I get real uncomfortable with the term Great American Family," said Mitch. "[There are] many families out here that are more deserving."

Cindy stated that she was surprised at the nomination because she does not consider her family that much different than other families on island.

The Stevisons will travel to Arlington, Va., to the SMDC Army Family Action Plan Conference in August to represent the command group here.

"This is a first time that USASMD C has had this competition," said Cris Foster, the command's civilian personnel officer.

Foster added a nomination package for the Stevison family will be submitted to Arlington, Va., next week and the winner announced June 1.

The USASMD C is USAKA's major Army command, with headquarters co-located in Arlington, Va., and Huntsville, Ala., according to LuAnne Fantasia, the command's public affairs officer.

"The spirit behind this new competition is that our major command wants to recognize our Army families and the contributions they make to their communities," Fantasia said. "All of our families here on Kwajalein are strong and energetic, and they're all winners ... but, we could only send one name forward for the competition. So, we voted."

Mitch Stevison said he looks forward to the conference and to "interact with other families," and C i n d y looks forward to same time as she and her husband did.

"I watched Cindy jump in with both feet," Brown said. Cindy immediately joined AWOL as the hospitality person. Brown cited leadership and team work as some of Cindy's attributes. According to Brown, Cindy leads by example and has a positive outlook.

Brown, also a member of the Yowke Yuk Women's Club, added Cindy is involved with the Yowke Yuk Women's club and headed-up the Ebeye Christmas exchange last year.

Cindy is currently finishing out this year as president and will also be the club's president next year.

"I know I can count on her," Brown said. "[She has] a very positive attitude that rubs off on everybody else."

Mitch said he recently signed up for two more years at the Reagan Test Site so their son could graduate from Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School, and because the family enjoys the many aspects of Kwajalein life.

He said that from a professional standpoint, he stands to learn more about his job and increase his knowledge.

"From a parent's stand-point, I don't have to worry as much about my kids," he added.

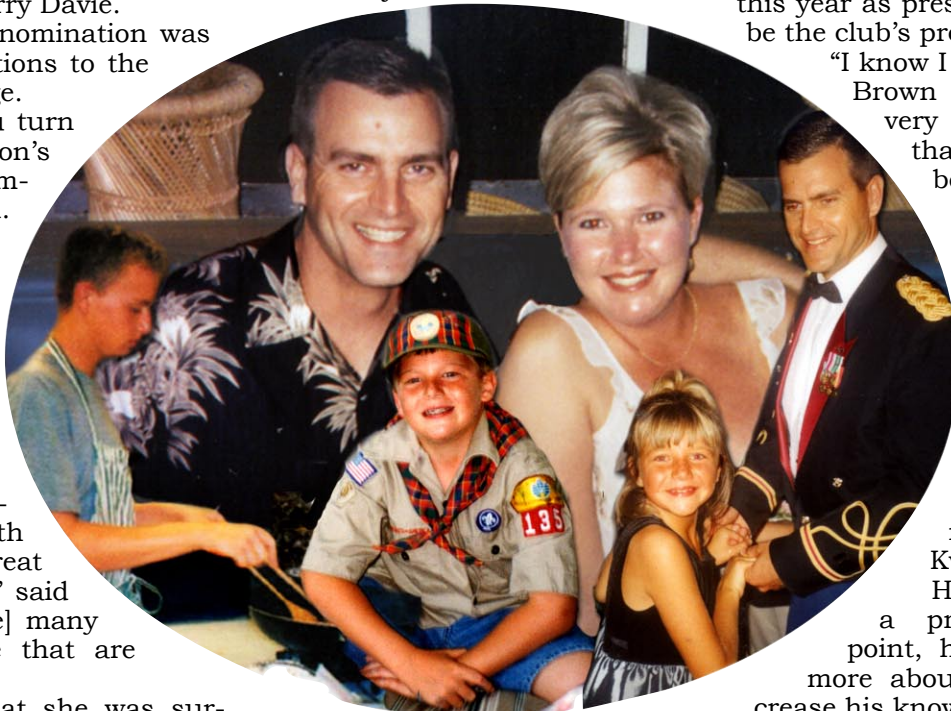

Hunter, who is in the sixth grade at George Seitz Elementary School, said he likes the freedom life on Kwajalein extends to him, and that on Kwaj he can go to a friend's home alone, whereas in the states his parents had to take him everywhere.

Brandon agreed with his brother, stating he wasn't sure he would like living on Kwaj at first, but he likes the freedom living here gives him.

Cindy said, "I love it here. Everybody looks out for one another."

And as much as she loves living on Kwajalein, Cindy admitted she would move back to the states when representing the command and the Reagan Test Site. The Stevison family will have an opportunity to highlight some of the challenges here on Kwajalein, as well as give an added representation at the conference.

Brandon, a sophomore at Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School, said he has been to Washington, D.C. several times with his mom and enjoys it more each time they go, but this will be the first time the entire family has gone together.

The Stevison's have lived on Kwaj just under two years.

Jane Brown, wife of USAKA Commander Col. Jerry Brown and member of the Army Women's Organizational League, said the Stevisons arrived on Kwajalein about the Brandon graduates. She would like to be close to him when he attends his first year of college.

She added that even the family dog, Nemo, likes Kwaj, although he had to give up chasing squirrels, but found a substitute in crabs.

Mitch and Cindy stay close with their kids through family activities, and Mitch likes to keep things low key.

"We figure out ways to get everyone together and try to do something to please everyone," Mitch said.

Cindy said, "We have always encouraged them to do everything they want to do," but she added they still have boundaries.

Mitch helps the children set priorities in their lives, encouraging diversity and spiritual growth.

The entire family participates in volunteer activities.

"We all do different things," Cindy said, adding they all work in the chapel programs, and have adopted a family on Ebeye.

"Give back to your community. It is part of our growing process.

It makes your family stronger," she added.

"They are very much involved in the church. They are the salt of the earth. We think they are grand," said Protestant Chaplain Rick Funk.

Funk added the Stevison family is involved in fellowship activities and special functions, decorating, cook-outs and Chapel breakfasts.

He said Mitch, who is an usher and active in the monthly prayer breakfast, also served as the Community Fellowship chairperson. Cindy works with the Christian Women's Fellowship, and the children are involved in Sunday school and youth activities.

"[Mitch and Cindy] are very involved in the life of the kids," Funk said, adding that Cindy worked part time in the church office until she resigned so she could spend more time with her kids.

"They have their priorities in order," Brown said. "The whole family is involved."

Brown added that Cindy makes sure she has time for her husband and children.

Each Stevison family member has special memories of Kwajalein. Nine-year-old Katy said her most vivid memory is seeing dolphins on her way to the golf course with her dad.

Brandon and Hunter had much more painful experiences.

Hunter remembers breaking four toes while trying to out-jump his friends, but still proudly states he won the jumping contest.

Brandon remembers the multiple coral cuts he and his dad received during a snorkeling experience shortly after they arrived on Kwajalein, and Cindy laughed when she recalled the story of Brandon actually catching a shark off North Point.

Mitch said he doesn't have just one memorable experience, but many with his family—but if he had to choose, it would be the ability to do recreational activities all the time and spend time with his family, each member different from the others.

"We feed off each others differences. I learn a lot from my kids," he said.

Travel options grow in time for summer season

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Travel options have grown despite sluggish start to the summer season, according to Yvonne Duarte, Continental Ticket Office manager.

Duarte said Kwajalein travelers are running about a month behind the normal traffic.

"Usually all reservations are made by March, and we finish ticketing in May," Duarte said. "This year, we won't stop ticketing till early June."

Duarte cited residents' uncertainty following the completion of the first year of their contracts and the mission schedule as possible impacts on the travel traffic.

But with the March contracts now resigned and the schedule somewhat more clear, travel is picking up.

And the ticket office now has more options to offer travelers.

Aloha, for example, recently began offering children's fares again, a practice they had suspended earlier in the year. Currently, child seats run at a 25 percent discount off the regular adult fare, so a Kwaj-to-Hono seat costing adults around $877, cost around $667 for children.

With the fare reinstatement, Kwajalein Range Services employees with children may again elect to fly Aloha.

The company will not refund previously used tickets, Duarte said, but the ticket office will exchange unused Continental tickets for Aloha tickets. Duarte asked affected residents to contact the office for details.

Also, as previously reported, Aloha lifted its luggage weight limit for travelers heading from Kwajalein to Honolulu.

The airline now allows one bag weighing up to 70 pounds, while a second bag, up to 70 pounds, may fly free on a space-available basis.

Additional baggage, up to 35 pounds, may fly space available for $25 per bag.

Bags must remain under 62 inches in linear dimensions or for $25 up to 80 inches of linear dimensions.

The revision does not apply to flights from Kwajalein to Majuro.

Additionally, Aloha now offers fly-through fares from Kwajalein to Las Vegas for $1,500.

The airline has expanded its North America destinations, as well, giving Kwaj travelers access to Canada and other West Coast spots, all while remaining on Aloha.

For Hawaii's inter-island travel, Duarte recommends booking Aloha flights at the same time as flights off-island, to take advantage of other discounted through fares.

Meanwhile, those not on company-paid trips or those remaining on the island through the summer who want to bring friends and family out, can use Continental's companion fares, which run $1,000 for the first person and $999 for the second and include round trip from any destination in the continental U.S. to Kwajalein.

Continental now offers package deals to Bali, Australia, Hong Kong and Japan which include air, ground transportation and hotel accommodations.

Duarte said the office sold 50 packages from June to December last year, enough to warrant bringing them back for a second season.

In addition, the airline is working to create a Disney package to Los Angeles and maybe a special Kosrae-Pohnpei deal.

Among the islands, Kosrae and Pohnpei remain a favorite among Kwajalein travelers.

Inter-island travel to Majuro and outer islands like Likiep have increased, as well, she said, noting Majuro, in particular, has seen additional tourism from Kwajalein residents.

Tickets there run $190 round-trip, and locals have discovered the restaurants and hotels on the capital atoll, she said.

Kwaj travelers have resumed overseas travel, Duarte said, after terrorism and SARS scares of the past few years took a toll on foreign bookings. Bali and Australia stand as the hottest tickets, she said.

"People are traveling [again]," she said. "They've got some concerns, but it's not where they feel threatened."

Duarte said many customers now come in having reviewed the State Department's security briefings, along with other Internet and printed material for various foreign destinations.

"They're doing more research now," Duarte said. "They're smarter travelers now."
